

Remembering our brothers who have passed from this life

Angus Irving Hines, Jr., '42

August 7, 1923 - September 24, 2019

Angus only attended AMA for one year as a post graduate.

“Angus,” our photographer friend, attained his goal by becoming Best New Cadet of 1941-'42. This insurance of a successful future is only part of a brilliant life ahead. With the last click of the shutter, we say good-bye to Angus Hines.

Page 2 shows a complete biography of Angus and the history of his family's oil distribution company.

ANGUS I. HINES, JR. — Since the beginning of his career, Angus I. Hines, Jr., has been identified with the oil distributing firm which bears the Hines name, and which has its headquarters in Suffolk. The organization has built up an effective distributorship, which now has a branch at Smithfield. Mr. Hines is a veteran of the maritime service in World War II, and is active in local organizations and in his church.

Born at Suffolk on August 7, 1923, he is a son of Angus I., Sr., and Lois (Howell) Hines. His father, who was born in Southampton County in 1894, entered the oil business at Suffolk, establishing the firm of Angus I. Hines, Inc., to which he gave his name.

His son has been interested in the same field of endeavor since the beginning of his business career. Receiving his early education in the public schools of Suffolk, he graduated from high school there in 1941, and took further studies at Augusta Military Academy before entering Georgia School of Technology. He concluded his formal education with a year at R. C. A. Institute in New York City. Before he had time to begin his career, he entered the wartime service of his country with the Merchant Marine, in which he served for two years and a half.

In 1945 he joined his father in the oil distributing business. His organization acted as distributor for the products of The Texas Company in the Lower Tidewater area. The elder Angus I. Hines had founded a distributorship in 1923, and headed it until his death on July 24, 1953. Following his death the firm was incorporated as Angus I. Hines, Inc. Lois L Hines is its president, James P. Harris is vice president, and Angus I. Hines, Jr., is secretary and treasurer. The firm employs fourteen people and its headquarters is in Suffolk. They operate a branch at Smithfield, identified by its own name as the Smithfield Oil Company. The firm operates eight mobile units on the road, and for modern and efficient service, these are equipped with two-way radio.

Mr. Hines is a Rotarian, and a member of Hiram Lodge No. 340, Free and Accepted Masons. He is a member of the higher bodies of Masonry, and is past high priest of Mount Nebo Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and a member of Portsmouth Commandery, Knights Templar. He is also a member of Khedive Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Norfolk. Attending the Main Street Methodist Church at Suffolk, he serves on its board of stewards. Mr. Hines is fond of the out-of-doors, and his favorite sport is boating.

At Reidsville, North Carolina, on November 24, 1949, Angus I. Hines, Jr., married Genevieve H. McCollum of that city, daughter of William E. and Genevieve (Hopkins) McCollum. Mr. and Mrs. Hines have one daughter, Ann Russell, who was born on August 20, 1953.
