Sandy doesn't have a problem that he can't solve with ease, for he doesn't allow himself to go to bed unless he has cleared his conscience. That's why Sandy has earned a lot of respect from his fellow classmates. Neat, glass shine, and a bit of a shock of thinning blonde hair give Sandy a distinctive look—even in uniform. When the group starts to play, Sandy is right in there and he's something of a social butterfly when he wants to be. Another Virginia gentleman, Sandy extends his hand to everyone. Result?— in two brief years, he has distinguished himself and he has started heading in the right direction.
